A simple introduction to the colors, and fun animals and objects, found on the farm. Each page is dedicated to just one color, giving the youngest of eyes a chance to understand what the color looks like. The color is spelled out on each page, showing the younger reader the correspondence between spelling and color. Each page matches up to a rhyming page, helping the more experienced reader with comprehension. Finally, the cute illustrations capture the minds of all readers alike. This is a part of a collection of color books. All books deliver the colors in the same order, which is helpful for young readers. The final color in all the books is black, with the exact same line about nightfall, letting the child know s/he is almost finished and doing a great job. Each book starts and ends with about the same phrasing, encompassing the book as a whole. Each book is different, each illustration different, but the result is the same: laughter and learning.

Some animal farms are up in the hills, or down winding lanes. But Silver Street Farm is different – it's in the middle of a city, and it's run by kids! Even though Meera, Gemma, and Karl live in the city, they've always wanted a farm of their own. And it looks as though their dream may happen sooner than they imagined when Meera discovers an abandoned railway station with grounds for grazing. Next, some eggs they thought were foul hatch into ducklings, and a couple of "poodles" bought off the Internet turn out to be lambs. There's just one problem: how can the kids — and the community — persuade the city council not to turn the old site into a parking garage? The first in a series of fun-filled stories about Silver Street Farm, here is a tale with natural appeal for kids who love animals, aim to be green, and enjoy a do-it-yourself spirit of adventure.
